

Summer Reading Challenge

In delivering the keynote at the National Summer Learning Day Fair held at the U.S. Department of Education in June 2014, former First Lady Michelle Obama said:

“So if you’re not picking up a book, and all you’re doing all summer long is sitting on the couch and catching up on TV shows, then I guarantee that you’re going to lose some ground next year in school. And that won’t just make a difference this fall, it can show up in the years ahead.”

Dear Parents and Guardians,

Our Roadrunners will have a summer reading challenge where they can win prizes for participation! Your child has received a summer reading list of 10 books. For each book read, they will complete a short activity. Activities will be on the back of the summer reading list. K-1, 2-3, and 4-5 will have different guidelines, so be sure to read carefully if you have children in the different grade levels. Your child will return the completed activity sheet to the media center where they will receive their prizes and be recognized on our school’s news station, WRES!

Have a great summer,
Samantha Bodiford
Ruediger Media Specialist

